om California-By the Ove

"A friend of ours, who does business on Main street, in this city, was travelling a few weeks ago in Arkansas, some 50 or 60 miles below Memphis. As night came on at the $1,50. conclusion of a long day's travel, he arrived head was protruded from a window, and in reply to a question from the owner of the head, he said he wished to stay for the night. The head was withdrawn, and a consultation apparently took place with some one within, and after a little delay the head was again advanced, and our friend asked his name .-We will not give the name stated-that of come in. On entering he could discover nothing sus-

go as soon as he had finished his breakfast and paid his bill, but he insisted on knowing why so much spying and whispering were going on? "Why, are you not Mr. Fulkerson that saw the house before," was the reply. In a moment a look of intense satisfaction beamed had spent the night, had formerly been the property of a man of the same name as himself. This man had been absent some years. As with disappointment and sorrow. The traveller was heartily invited to stop and partake of the wedding supper; his business called him away, however, but he has since learned that the marriage took place without any outward interruption. If the real John Fulkerson, of Arkansas, should be alive and see this, let him take warning and never approach the house he has deserted, for he is most COMMUNICATED, its own funeral urn, and fired its pyre by became ashes; but ever would rise the young -beautiful from the urn of death, and chambers of decay, would the fledgling come, with its eye turned toward the sun, and essaying its dark velvet wings, sprinkled with gold and fringed with silver, on the balmy air raising a little higher, until at length, in the full confidence of flight it gives a cry of joy, and soon becomes a glittering speck in the deep bosom of the zerial ocean-Lovely voyager of earth, bound on its heavenward journey to the sun! So rises the spirit bird from the ruins of the body, the funeral urn which its maker built, and death fires. So towers away to its home in the pure elements of spiritu-ality the intellect Phoenix, to dip its proud wings in the fountain of eternal bliss.

So shall dear, precious humanity survive from the ashes of a burning world. So beautifully shall the exchanged soul soar within the disc of Eternity's great lumina-ry, with undassled eye and unscorched wings-the Phoenix of immortality-taken to its rainbow home, and cradled on the beating bosom of eternal love."

TIRGINIA :- At Rules held in the Clerk's Of-V fice of the Circuit Court of Alexandria County, on the 7th day of March, 1859, W. Arthur Taylor, Trustee, plaintiff, against Reuben Johnston, J. D. Corse, and M. D. Corse, and Edward Snowden, late copartners under the name of Corse, Snowden & Corse, Hopkins & Hull, Duer. Norris & Co., William A. Dean & Co., and Lewis and Drost, defendants—in Chancery. The object of this suit is to enable the plaintiff, who is trustee under a certain deed of trust from Reuben John-ston and wife, to administer said trust under the direction of the Court, to ascertain who are the creditors entitled to participate in the distribution of the trust fund, the amount of the respective claims, and for a settlement of the account of said trustee, and distribution of the assets, in his hands, among the parties entitled thereto. The defen-dants, Hopkins & Hull, Duer, Norris & Co., William A. Dean & Co., Lewis & Brost, and Edward Snowden, not having entered their appearance and given security according to the act of Assembly and the rules of this Court, and it appearing by affidavit that they are not residents of this State it is ordered, that the said defendants appear here within one month after due publication of this order, and do what is necessary to protect their interest in this suit; and that a copy of this order be forthwith inserted in the Alexandria Gazette, a newspaper published in the city of Alexandria, once a week for four successive weeks, and posted at the front door of the Court house of this County.

not agreeably so. "Yes, John Fulkerson." was the reply, in a tone that had an expression of impatience about it; for the traveller was hungry as well as tired, and not being a priest, fasting never smoothed his temper. The head was again withdrawn at this announcement, as rapidly as an Irishman once nouncement, as rapidly as an Irishman once miums, selected by the best judges, and warranted withdrew his, when he knelt and took a drink in every respect, making a large and elegant stock, out of one of the boiling springs of the state in which the adventure we are relating took place. Some time now elapsed; the night was cold, and our hangry friend found his quarters in front of the solitary house not at all to his mind. At length he hammered ten guarantee given with each new instrument.

violently at the door several times, and uttered a series of ejaculations, more indicative of a flexible tongue than of profound piety. He then took a look round the premises, to ascertain, if possible, the reason of the unac-countable delay. He discovered a man stealing silently away in the rear, who jumped over the fence and set off in a run, that spoke well for his agility, in the direction of the timber. The front door was opened at this moment, and a negro girl called to him to picious; a good supper was set before him and he was attentively waited upon. He noticed, however, that the negro was very curt in her replies to his questions, and that when he asked anything about the inmates of the place she manifested an emotion that looked like alarm. He retired to bed, too greatly fatigued to reflect much upon the singularity of this conduct; he slept well, and was at an early hour eating his breakfast, when he observed a pair of eyes intently gazing at him from a chink in the wall that divided the passage. Determined to know the meaning of the singular behaviour he had observed in that place—for around indicate the singular behaviour he had observed in that place—for around indicate the singular behaviour he had observed in the singular behaviour he had observed in the place—for around indicate the singular behaviour he had observed in the singular behaviou that place-for every individual about it, whom he accosted, answered him with trepidation in the fewest possible words, and then hurried away from him as if in fear-he rushed into the passage and catching hold of the man whose eyes had been so busily engaged, he demanded the reason of his singular scrutiny. The man appeared overcome with agitor at once recognized as the same he had paired at heard on the previous night-if Mr. Fulkerson intended to stay? No. Mr. Fulkerson would from the man's face which had before worn a and without another word he rushed up stairs, three or four steps at a time, and quickly returned, bringing with him, a portly looking dame, whose eyes were red, as if with weeping, and exclaimed in a tone of joyous surprise as soon as she caught sight of our bewildered friend, who could not for the life of him guess what had bewildered the folks —" Is it not John?" An explanation then ensued, from which it appeared that the house in which our friend nothing had been heard from him during all that time, his better half, the lady who appeared so much pleased that he was not John," had resolved to take another husband, and the knot was to be tied that very evening. On the previous evening her inten-ded second husband was paying his attentions to a lover, when the announcement of the name of "John Fulkerson" from our friend, in a moment spread dismay and consternation where all had been joy and anticipation. The lover stole off the back way, to be beyond the reach of danger: the lady had spent the night in weeping; once she had mourned her husband's absence, now she grieved over his return. The quietness of the unexpected and unwelcome guest had, however, somewhat reassured the distressed couple; the lover had cautiously returned to the house and was making his observations, when our friend unceremoniously seized him. The tidings were quickly spread, and laughter and mirth soon filled the dwelling that had been doleful
